

Green Onions

I threw some green onions in a jar of water.
I gave up on gardening a long time ago, angrily
tossing accidentally-dead aloe plant one after another in the trash.
Day by day, I watched them grow inch-by-inch, hungrily reaching for the sun. The onions gave me the confidence that I can take care of another living being. I can nurture I can change.

GROW YOUR OWN GREEN ONIONS

Step 1: When cutting your green onions for your tasty meal, leave three inches of the white root portion intact.

Step 2: Place the roots inside a jar of water, with the top exposed to air.

Step 3: Put your jar next to a sunny window.

Step 4: Change your water every few days.

Step 5: Watch your onions grow!
